

Importance of English language

In today's modern scenario where we are too much dependent on technology, we cannot think of life without English language. Be it a professional, a housewife or a student, no one can think of progress without the knowledge of English language. English is a link language for communication with people in other countries as well. Most of the countries of the world have English as their second language and if we know the language we can easily communicate in those countries, forget about other countries in our own country itself, specially in the southern states we find people are not comfortable speaking in the national language Hindi but can communicate to a certain extent in English. We should never have a mind block and feel that if we speak or give importance to the English language we are disrespecting our own national language Hindi. Knowing more than one language is always an added advantage. Do we feel bad knowing our mother tongue? Then why do we feel so about English? Since it was the language brought by the British we should not speak or know this language is again a wrong reasoning. I would rather say that English language has really helped us to progress a lot.

English language is becoming really indispensable. It has not to be taken as only the status symbol, but when we speak about the information available through various sources-be it internet, books, brochures, courses through colleges or private institutions, everywhere you will find plethora of information available in this language as compared to any other language.

It's high time we understand the importance of English language and anyone who has not had the opportunity due to some or the other reason to get trained in this particular language and feels has missed the bus, should not feel dejected or depressed but should take up the challenge and join some language institute to get trained and enjoy the benefits of the language.
